THE DRAMA.

MISS JANAUSCHER'S DEBORAH.

Miss Janauschek played Deborah, at the Academy of Music, on Saturday evening, and thoroughly delighted one of the largest audiences of the season The play performed was Dr. H. S. Mosentkal's "Debo rah," which is known to the American stage through the medium of Mr. Daly's adaptation of "Leah." It is an excellent play, simple in plot, pure in style, and fraught with intense pathes. A considerable portion of its text is written in blank verse. The action is comprised within four acts, which, in the playing, are expanded into seven by: the frequent drop-curtain. We need not retell the story of this piece. It is thoroughly well known. Wrought mp by the hand of the true artist, it depicts an intense, pure, and wildly passionate love; a state of misery unjustly inflicted; a franticlomburst of despair; and finally lefty self-abnegation that is positively sublin Deborah's nature is not merely permented with the spirit of sweet womanhood, but is invested with a halo of grandeur. She is far superior to the man whom she loves; and upon this fact, we think, rest the great passion and pathos of her experience. Few conditions of Seeling, indeed, are more weful than is that of a great nature that loves | beneath itself, and is disappointed and wrenged by an inferior being. Miss Janauschek brought this thought closely home to us, by her superbly intellectual and intensely emotional acting, in the second and third acts of "Deborah." No previous personator of the charseter has seemed to have a heart in her bosom. Miss Janauschek's Deborah loves Joseph, as only a woman of tine brain and true feminine passion ever does or ever can love. Her meeting and her parting with him, in the forest; her struggle between leve and duty; when about to abandon her starving friends for his sake; her supplication to old Lorenzo and to Hanna, when cast out from the cottage door; and her thrilling adjuration to Joseph, after he has thrown his purse at her feet and rushed away,—all bespoke, what is seldom seen in acting, a woman's heart. We have never heard more thrilling tenes of ageny than those in which she cried out in the darkness and called her lover's name. There was utter shipwreck in them, of love and hope and life. After that, in the celebrated churchyard scene, the insulted intellect conjoined with the outraged heart, and she was terrible in her withering scorn and her tumultuous passion. It was not declamation that we heard, but the natural language of uncontrollable feeling. On previous occasons when we have seen this play, it has often seemed to us that Deborah's curse was out of harmony with her mature and her experience—that so great a revulsion had not been warranted by any previous display of intensity. But Miss Janauschek's Deborah is thoroughly consistent. Her great love, her deep misery, her frantic passion, her awful violence fellow one another in perfectly natural sequence. And the calm that succeeds the stormthe sad serenity with which she forgives, and blesses, and disappears-is equally natural and characteristic. Not only has woman's goodness resumed its sway in her being, but her heart has communed with itself, in the course of five long years of desolate wandering, and is conscious o its mistake. The flame has died out. There is but a faint glow in the embers. Night is coming down. Purified and sanctified by suffering, the stately Jewess giides away over the darkening hill; and the cold stars seem to shine and the chill wind to sigh in our thoughts, as we turn from this beautiful ideal of trium phant seif-sacrifice and self-conquest. Miss Janauschel merits cordial admiration for such an impressive person onation of character. "Deborah" was put upon the stage with singular accuracy of costumes and very neat scenery, and very well acted throughout the cast. Mile Tietz's Hanna deserves especial mention, for the gentle modesty and sweetness of sentiment by which it was marked. The school-master was played with fidelity and feeling, by Mr. Crelinger. Mr. Klemart's Abrum was most discreetly acted. "Deborah" is to be repeated on Tuesday, and on Thursday we are to see "Adricane The

The French Theater was crowded on Saturday, at the Matinee. Ristori played Marie Autoinette. She has seldom, if ever, played so well. The audience greeted her with frequent outbursts of uncontrollable applause, and were often melted to tears. We are in ed to think that Ristori's Marie Antoinette is her great est personation. At any rate, it is one of the finest historic portraits that grace the stage, and it is a wonderful de eation of human suffering. Signor Giaccommetti's play has been reduced to a reasonable length. It will be again acted to-night, and we strongly arge the admirers Her engagement at the French Theater will terminate on Saturday next.

BROADWAY THEATER.

Julia Dean, who, as already announced, will commence an engagement to night at the Broadway Theater, is to make her first appearance as Ann Catherick, in "The Woman in White." She also plays Laura Fairlie, in the same piece. We described her excellent acting in these characters when she appeared here last Summer. At that time most of the old theatergoers were out of town. Now, however, they are all here, and we may expect them to rally in great force to the standard of Julia Dean. "The Duke's Wager" will the standard of Julia Dean. "The Duke's Wager" will be acted here on Wednesday and Thursday, "The Wife's Secret" on Friday, and "Locrocia Borgia" on Saturday. "The Duke's Wager" will be repeated at the Saturday Matiner. Mr. Frank Lawlor is to sustain the leading business at the Broadway Theater during Julia Dean's engagement. Mr. Henry Lytinge appeared at this theater on Saturday, and was very successful in a horippipalance. If Mr. Eydinge intends to act, however, he might profit by Panch's become advice to persons about to marry—"Don't!" WALLACK'S THEATER.

The promised change of bill will be made here to night. "The Rent Day" will be brought out with an excellent cast. Mr. J. W. Wallack will play Martin Heyscood. Mr. W. R. Floyd, returning hither after two years of absence from a theater in which he was always prized, will appear as Silver Jack. Mr. Mark Smith will ay Hyssop. The cast will further include Mr. John Gilbert, Mr. Young, Mr. Ringgold, Mr. Rockwell, Mrs. Jenmings, Miss Gannon and Mrs. Setton. The farce of "40 and 50" is to follow the comedy. Mr. Floyd, we should note, will remain here but a short time, as his theater in New Orleans requires his presence soon. While he does remain we trust he will often play; for we have few art-ists so truthful, so poished, or so pleasing. A new drama is announced as in preparation at Wzback's, and shortly to be produced, "Caste" will be acted in the course of the season. FIFTH AVENUE THEATER.

The rosy gods of mirth appear to prosper at this theater. The old but good buriesque of Aladdin has been revived, copiously supplied with local hits, and neatly presented. Mr. Leffingweil has delighted his admirers as the Widow Twankey. The burlesque will be offered every night this week, together with "Too Much For Good Nature." A Matinee will be given on Wedneshis first appearance to-night, at Irving Hali. Mrs. Brown's Travels will be described in her own peculiar dialect and with her characteristic humor.

DEAMATIC NOTES. Mr. Arthur Sketchly (Mrs. Brown) will make

Several new features are to be introduced. this week, into the programme of entertainment presented at the Circus. The Runnells Family will appear. Joseph Pfaw, a Russian gymnast, of great fame, has arrived in New-York, and will shortly appear at the Circus. He is said to excel the famous Leotard, in the latter's greatest performance. The Flying Trapeze. The attendance at the Circus has been steadily large, since the "Pale Janet" and the Gorilla are drawing constant crowds to Barnum's Museum. Both are sensational, and, pulling together, are not to be resisted by a virtuous and intelligent public.

Our readers are reminded that the present is Mr. Jefferson's last week at the Olympic. The comedian • Il take a Benefit on Fri lay. Let the house be crowded every night. It is a privilege and a laxury to see Mr. Jefferson's Kip Van Binkle.

The "Black Crook" exhibits no signs of decrepitade. "Age cannot stale nor custom wither its" scenes and its dances. The votaries of the Ballet are, of course, engaged in comparing the relative charms of that Institution, as presented at Niblo's and at Bonvard's. Their verifiet has not transpired but it appears that both "The Black Crook" and "The Devil's Auction" are very popular. Banvard's was througed on Saturday evening.

Miss Zoe, at the New-York Theater, is still playing the French Spy, but is to appear, in the course of the week, in "The Angel of Midnight."

The attention of the religious community is once more directed to the exhibition of The Pilgrims, at Bunyan Hall. The panorama is in good working order now, and is agreeably illustrated by selections of sacred guide.

A few days ago an examination of the books of a certain cotton wareheuse in this city showed that a heavy difference existed between the number of bales in store and the number entered in the books. It was discovered that so bales had been mysteriously translated, and it is supposed the export tax. The Tobacco-Beard met on Saturday. It is the general opinion that the Department will not force dealers to obey the regulations with respect to bonding, but will leave the warehouse system as it was.

GEN. SHERMAN IN NEW-YORK. Lieutenant-Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman arrived in this city on Saturday merning, from Washington, where he was in confidence with other officers of the Government. His old friend, Mr. William Scott, welcomed him at his manslon, No. 64 East Twenty-third st. At the Saturday matinee at the French Thea ter, he attended incognito, accompanied by a number of personal friends, and witnessed Madame Ristori's Marie Antoinette. At the close of the performance he had an audience with the tragedienne in the green room. Yesterday morning he went to Calvary Church in Fourthave, and to the same church again in the evening. His civilian's dress effectually disguised him wherever he went, and few sinew him as the hero of the splendid March to the Sea. To-day he leaves for St. Louis, to resume the control of Indian military affairs. can arrived in this city on Saturday merning, from

ALLEGED OESTRUCTING OF THE MAIL.

United States agt. Richard Latty.

The defendant is a policeman. On the 8th inst. a boy was driving a United States mail wagon in the upper part of the city, and prevented a horse-car from going at its proper rate of speed by allowing the wagon to remain in front of the horses, and refusing to either furn out or drive fast. For this he was arrested, and, on being taken before the Justice, was fined $10.

These facts coming to the knowledge of Mr. James Gay-

HOFF'S MALT EXTRACT. DEAR Sin: Allow me to add to the testimonials which the heroes of Medical Science both in Europe and in this country have willingly given to you also my approval—not to demonstrate by it the high value of your Malt Extract, but to felfill my duty by thanking my benefictor. For two years I have been sick with the rheamatle typhus fever, suffering also from swelling and sofering of the hones. Thanks to the care of an excellent physician, my life has been saved after all. My parents have given me hopeless up. It is in the power of good physicians and of medi-cines to cure diseases. But for the great loss of strength, general debility, fear and auxiety, and all other illa which followed my fever, there was no cure.

At last our physician induced me to try Hoff's Malt Extract. Its taste delighted me. I could take it without throwing itself soon afterward; could digest broth, then chicken, and now I have left my bed, enjoying some strength and good appetite.
